

Residents evaluated architectural proposals

The city of Vaasa wanted to build an ecological, versatile and pleasant new area, Ravirata. An architectural competition was organized in the autumn of 2013, and 63 architectural companies sent their proposals.

Mapita created a web site to present the propositions to the public and to collect feedback on them. The residents voiced their opinions about the proposals, evaluating their good and bad qualities. They made over a thousand comments, which Mapita compiled in a report that will benefit the later planning of the area.

“Cooperation with Mapita has been rewarding, and the company has shown such technical skills, knowledge of programs, research capabilities and creativity that few others provide.”
